AFTER THE DROUGHT

Drenched poppies
drop curtsies
in the mud.

MARTHA CHRISTINA

WATCHING A PAN OF BOILING GOULASH

the aerial view
of a large audience
applauding

MATTHEW KONKEL

POETRY TASTING

Eyes closed but watchfully

Words roll in the mouth of the mind

Hints of Prufrock

Nose of Crane's incantations

Ivo DRURY

produce stand
on a steamy August day
even the corn sweats

BRUCE W. NIEDT

EDINBURGH

an ancient stone
catches a hipbone—
bagpipes

KAREN STROMBERG

FAT CAT POEM

The cat is fat
But still stalking.
Swinging belly, squat haunches
But still stalking.

TOM THUMB

heat lightning
outside the window
war on TV

BRUCE W. NIEDT

CLOCKWORK

Unmysterious day,
full of dime-a-dozen sounds
sloshing like the contents of a teacup on a train.

JILLIAN SMITH

VACATION

standing on the pier
watching surfers and sunbathers
I turn the jar over her ashes fall through my fingers

TRACY DAVIDSON

WHAT HAVE I DONE?

No real food or sleep for days —
only doll's head tea in a rusty bucket brewed with scalding tears.

TIM HAWKINS

MAPPING

Change a letter: east turns west. Change
two: north turns south,
and you're hopelessly lost.

MARTHA CHRISTINA

ARCHEOLOGIST

I sift sand,
careful to touch nothing—
cat box

KAREN STROMBERG

SUMMER SYMPHONY

Mower gums, coughs, then hums

Ka-chink, that was a rock

Jays critique the yard work

Heavy-footed squirrel on top

JENNI THIESSEN

loon calls over the water
our laughter in return

JOANNE MERRIAM

Across scrolls and sagebrush
Sweep armfuls of lush tunics
And brush strokes

TOM THUMB

SNAPSHOT

Poems are like photographs —
frame, focus, flash.

Check the light and depth of field,
crop out all the trash.

KATHLEEN UNGER HART

HAIKU CXV

warm ripe strawberry
taste of summer's affection
as shadows lengthen

DT.HAASE

HOURGLASSES

Eyes close slowly, deliberately as though he can't be rushed in anything—
even the unconscious act of blinking.

JILLIAN SMITH

AT THE SENIOR GAMES

I was driving around the parking lot looking for my car when a friend asked me
what I was doing

BRUCE BEN POPE

I lie still
but less and less
to myself.

KELSEY SHIPMAN

RECALL

On the news they hear something about Toyota runaways.

Later, he floors the Camry,
laughing while she screams.

BARRY BASDEN

BICYCLE

Retirement home dusk:
A bicycle built for two,
Rear seat riderless.

ROBERT DEMAREE

SEPTEMBER

sunlight stitched hard through cicada wings and broken shells—
tossed to the ground,
rubbed in the dirt.

SARAH LUCILLE MARCHANT

TWO DANDELIONS

I hope you are still dancing
In the field
While I burst through a crack
Of city sidewalk
